HARRISON'S GREAT COMBINATION—In Extent and First Exhibition in Washington.

Burns, the prince of living showmen, may well sustain, when he speaks of his experience in Washington, "Yest, vist, vist, vist." And now, I am told, he is to be seen in Boston, where he may be a popular favorite.

Harrisons' great exhibition has presented to the amusement-loving public of the District the most complete and elaborate manufacture, numberless novelties, and the most varied and diversified variety of exhibits.

The entire exhibition was heralded in our local papers yesterday morning.

A few of our patrons had read the news, the grand processions wended its way through many of our principal streets, exciting the admiration of thousands of spectators, and of thousands of little ones as well as those of larger growth.

For consequence, when the show opened, the audience was so large, the throng which gathered, pressing the theater, was sufficient to gild to the highest point the entire interior.

She was the credit of America's begining, and her shores are the bound point from which all the world's progress has sprung. How too was first unfolded the hidden mysteries of the Native Americans; here was first unfolded the history of the Indians.

The scenes were like those of horror, and were like scenes of beauty, and were like scenes of grandeur.

The animals were like those of beauty, and were like scenes of grandeur.

The animals were like scenes of grandeur.
